Welcome to The White Hut

Spend your holiday in 'Cornwall's Forgotten Corner'. The White Hut is a self-catering chalet situated on the cliffs edge of Whitsand Bay, near Plymouth, and a short walk from the beach.

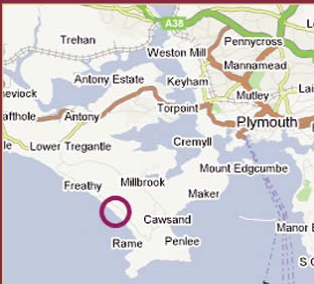

The White Hut chalet was originally built in 1934 as a Sheep Station on the Mount Edgcumbe Estate and was used in war times as a lookout station. My family purchased the chalet in 1964 and the chalet was rebuilt and completed in February 2006. The area is part of the Rame Peninsula and is known for its coastal walks and is an ideal place to relax, refresh and discover Cornwall's Forgotten Corner.

The walk to and from the beach is very steep, you will need sensible walking shoes and children will need guidance on certain paths. There is a path to the main beach.

The White Hut is NOT suitable for wheelchair users, or people with limited mobility.

Dogs allowed (maximum of 2)

Location: Whitsand Bay, Cornwall, near Plymouth

Facilities

The chalet has a large south facing decking area, perfect for enjoying the sun! Double glazed windows allow you to enjoy the views all year round. For the winter months there is a wood burner.

The open-plan layout gives adequate room to sleep 4, with a double bed and a futon which easily turns into a double bed. There is also a travel cot for the little ones. If you have a large party, there is enough lawn area to accommodate 2-3 tents.

The Chalet has a kitchen and shower/wet room with WC and hand basin. It also has the luxury of hot running water (heated by gas), and there is a wind generator which supplies 12V power.

There is no mains electricity, so no hairdryers, etc but there is an adaptor for laptops and mobile phone chargers (car charger only).
